

GORDON STRONG WEDS HIS TYPIST IN SECRET.

Employees, However, Learn of Marriage, Which Ends "Lonesome" Life of Their "Boss."

Gordon Strong, capitalist and owner of the Republic building, has added a sixth member to his adopted family. But this time the new guest is not a lonesome waif. The new member will take the philanthropist's name and as his wife will complete the family which in 1912 Mr. Strong began to establish to make his life less lonesome.

On Thursday the list of marriage licenses included the names of Gordon Strong and Miss Louise Ann Snyder. Miss Snyder proved to be a stenographer in the offices of Gordon Strong & Co. in the Republic building.

In 1912 Mr. Strong launched his "home" scheme for boys. He took as wards Kenneth and Floyd Keefe, 2 and 6 years old, who were of good family but whose mother found it hard to bring them up with even ordinary advantages. Later Mr. Strong accepted three more children and built a home at Dickerson, Md.

Mr. Strong and his bride will live at 38 East Schiller street.
